AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 15, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- RetailMeNot (www.retailmenot.com), the largest digital coupon destination in the United States, today released a retail forecast examining consumer behaviors on personal wealth, savings and confidence and buying patterns for 2014.

The forecast provides an overview of a survey conducted in conjunction with The Omnibus Company (www.omnibus.com) and RetailMeNot.com coupon click activity throughout 2013. The goal was to study and call out any differences between what consumers said they intend to shop for in 2014 and what they did shop for on RetailMeNot.com during comparative periods in 2013.

"We are excited to release our Retail Forecast for the year," said Jill Balis, senior vice president of marketing for RetailMeNot, Inc. "The data provides great insights into what consumers are shopping for in 2014 and also reveals interesting retail trends."

Highlights from the survey include:

- More than 6 in 10 (62%) used credit cards (both non-store or store-specific credit cards) to pay for their winter holiday gifts.
- Nearly 2 in 10 (19%) married individuals carried $500 or more in debt into 2014.
- Almost 4 in 10 (39%) people describe themselves as spenders, not savers.
- Of those planning to shop online in 2014, 87% plan to shop the same amount or more, with over a quarter (26%) planning to shop more.
- Nearly 8 in 10 (77%) parents used cash to pay for their gifts as opposed to 59% of those without children. 7 in 10 (70%) parents also used debit cards to pay for gifts versus 49% of non-parents.
- 67% of consumers surveyed (and 72% of women) said that they wanted retailers to offer more discounts in 2014 than they did in 2013.
- 90% surveyed planned to use their desktop computer to go shopping in 2014 versus 53% who planned to use a smartphone and 47% a tablet.

Report Methodology

Omnibus Information: The RetailMeNot January survey was conducted between December 26, 2013, and January 3, 2014, among 1,014 U.S. residents ages 18 and over, using an email invitation and an online report. Results of any sample are subject to sampling variation. The magnitude of the variation is measurable and is affected by the number of interviews and the level of the percentages expressing the results. In this particular study, the chances are 95 in 100 that a report result does not vary, plus or minus, by more than 3.1 percentage points from the result that would be obtained if interviews had been conducted with all persons in the universe represented by the sample. The margin of error for any subgroups will be slightly higher.

Coupon Click Data: RetailMeNot reviewed the average number of monthly coupon clicks on RetailMeNot.com for eight categories of retailers in 2013, including those primarily selling clothing and shoes; computers and electronics; books; home and garden supplies; automotive parts and supplies; travel; health and beauty; and toys. Coupon clicks on digital coupons from multi-category retailers (like Target, Walmart, Amazon and eBay) were excluded. RetailMeNot reported increases or declines in click activity from the average monthly click activity in 2013.
