Let the turkey fuel your inner retail warrior

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 1, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- With the three biggest shopping days of the year falling later this month, the season for savings is officially here. However, just because Thanksgiving, Black Friday and Cyber Monday happen at the end of November doesn't mean the rest of the month is a wash for deals. Keep reading to find out what to buy this month, what to avoid, and how to get the best savings possible.

Sara Skirboll, shopping and trends expert for RetailMeNot, advises that "While holiday shopping can be exhausting, it's still something that most everyone will need to do at some point or another this season. Be sure not to break the bank this year and follow a few of my favorite tips like plan ahead, stick to a budget, and start early. This is sure to save you some dollars and frustration." Skirboll adds, "Deals can be found all month so make sure to take advantage. Just be sure it's best deal before swiping your card. A few pro tips to get the most bang for your buck: Follow your favorite retailers on social media, always keep return policies in mind and, if possible, leave the kids at home to avoid unnecessary spending."
