

RetailMeNot Announces First-Ever "Holiday Hangover" Five Day Shopping Event Starting Today

- Score Savings on Everything Needed to Start 2022 Off Right With Exclusive Offers from RetailMeNot

- Smart Tips On Best Ways Shoppers Can Complete Unfulfilled Holiday Wish Lists and Spend Gift Cards in the New Year

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 5, 2022 /PRNewswire/ -- Today, RetailMeNot, a Ziff Davis business, kicks off its first-ever Holiday Hangover shopping event. Now through January 10th, the Holiday Hangover event will feature the best ways to save money on post-holiday shopping of unfulfilled wish lists and purchase everything shoppers need to start the new year off right with exclusive offers from retailers like UGG, Adidas and Forever 21.

In response to record numbers of shoppers not getting what they wanted during the holidays, RetailMeNot created the Holiday Hangover event to help people save on gifts and treat themselves in the new year. According to RetailMeNot's recent findings, most consumers plan to continue shopping without any break after the holidays, and due to shipping delays and inventory shortages, many consumers may have not fulfilled their wish lists over the holidays. To help shoppers navigate the post-holiday shopping season, RetailMeNot is launching the Holiday Hangover event where all deals, offers and tips are conveniently found in one place.

"With so many brands experiencing inventory shortages and shipping challenges this season, we suspect a large number of shoppers did not get exactly what they wanted during the holidays," says Kristin McGrath, shopping expert at RetailMeNot. "The good news is that as stores replenish their stock in January, shoppers will have ample opportunities to finally get what they want and to save! Our data suggests we will see a spike in shopping activity the first few weeks of January as people rush to secure items they didn't receive. Not only will shoppers be in the market for the items we typically see demand for in the new year like home goods, health and beauty, fitness, travel items, there will also be an increase in demand for holiday-related categories like toys, clothing and gifts."

RetailMeNot conducted a survey to uncover exactly what these post-holiday shoppers are looking for.

- Post-Holiday Shoppers Are Buying Gifts for Themselves & Looking for Gifts They Didn't Receive from Their Wish Lists
  - According to a recent survey, RetailMeNot found that 34% of Americans are planning to shop for themselves after the holiday season.
  - For those that did not receive exactly what they were looking for, 48% will be hunting for better deals and sales after the holidays.
  - We found 38% of consumers will be in-store or online to exchange or return unwanted gift items
- Shopping for Previously Out-of-Stock Items Due to Supply Chain Shortages Due to shortages stemming from COVID-19 this year, 29% will look for stores to have replenished product stock that was previously sold out.
- Gift Card Purchases to Continue Holiday Shopping and Cross Items Off Wish Lists: RetailMeNot's data shows gift card purchase intent made its way to the top of many shopping lists in December (up 63%), meaning consumers will be ready to spend in the weeks after the holidays.
- Shopping for Products to Start the New Year Off Right New Year's resolutions will give consumers another reason to shop, with 85% of people setting goals and 49% likely to spend money to keep their New Year's resolutions.
  - Top New Year's resolutions this year include saving money (44%), exercising more (35%), reducing stress (32%), losing weight (30%), and spending more time with family (28%).
  - Others will also focus on paying off debt (27%) and setting and sticking to a budget (22%)
