As a part of the partnership, RetailMeNot and Junior Achievement will develop curriculum for the 2012–2013 school year that will teach students to integrate smart couponing strategies into their everyday consumption behaviors. The curriculum will reach up to 4 million students and be made available to teachers across the U.S. to supplement existing financial literacy curricula.

"Our partnership with Junior Achievement will help us educate a new generation of consumers on how coupons can help them increase their personal savings," said Jill Balis, senior vice president of marketing for WhaleShark Media, Inc., operator of RetailMeNot. "Beyond providing monetary savings, learning couponing strategies enhances critical skills such as math, problem solving and overall financial literacy. If we can teach younger generations to consider savings strategies when shopping, they will become informed, discerning and empowered consumers, which will contribute to their overall financial well-being."

"Junior Achievement's educational programs focus on the core content areas of work readiness, entrepreneurship and financial literacy to inspire and prepare young people to succeed in a global economy. Educating students on how to use printable, mobile and online coupons for everyday purchases is another way we can teach students to maximize their budgets," said Jack E. Kosakowski, president and chief executive officer of Junior Achievement USA. "We look forward to working with RetailMeNot as we create awareness around saving money by developing curriculum on couponing strategies that will be made available to more than 176,000 participating classrooms."

In celebration of National Financial Literacy month, Junior Achievement will contribute content and share insights throughout the year on the RetailMeNot Savings Appreciation Campaign page to drive awareness around saving money. Additional contributors include personal finance expert Jean Chatzky and featured bloggers with expertise in parenting, frugal living and fashion.

RetailMeNot Austin Marathon Relay

In addition to supporting national curriculum development, RetailMeNot will be the title sponsor of the 2012 RetailMeNot Austin Marathon Relay benefiting Junior Achievement of Central Texas. The event, held on September 23, 2012, is the organization's largest annual fundraiser and one of the country's top relay events, featuring a global list of runners who enter the race. In 2011, the race raised over $100,000 for Junior Achievement, supporting financial education programs for at least 2,500 Central Texas students.

"This year, the RetailMeNot Austin Marathon Relay will be the best yet. We expect some of the fastest runners in the world will be here trying to break our own Guinness World Record," said Dave Swincher, president, Junior Achievement Central Texas. "We're really excited that a local Austin-based company like RetailMeNot.com has stepped up to the plate to support this race and the cause of financial literacy."
